Visitors to the National Encampment.

ENTERING a strange city, nothing adds so much to one's comfort as finding an old friend who is at home. Many of you have friends here who were not in the Army or Navy, but we cannot aid you much in finding them. We, however, give you herewith the name, Army or Navy service, and Grand Army Post of every comrade of our Department (over 3600). On arrival, all you need do is to examine this little book and find your friend, who will be glad to see you and show you all there is to be seen. As our Department embraces the names of comrades from almost every regiment and ship in the Union Army and Navy, in all probability you will find your man. Those who fail to find the name of a friend or an old Army or Navy acquaintance should read the short and handy guide we here publish. With its aid he will be able to see everything worth seeing, and take home a record of what he has seen that cannot fail to be of interest in the future. We might have published a large guide book and not told you half of what is contained herein, which would have taken all your time to read and study, and when done you would not be much wiser than when you commenced. This was gotten up especially for you—to meet what we know will be your real wants. It contains no padding, only what you want, and that easy to find.

WASHINGTON,

the capital of the United States, is located on the Potomac River, at the head of tide-water, and 110 miles from its mouth. In 1861 it had a population of less than 75,000. It now numbers over a quarter of a million. It is governed by three Commissioners, who are appointed by the President, and confirmed by the Senate. Taxation is borne equally by the General Government and the District of Columbia. This is upon an equitable basis, the Government owning about one-half of the property. It is, without doubt, the cleanest, best paved and shaded city in this or any other country. The city is divided into four sections, viz.: N. W., S. W., N. E., and S. E. When the visitor understands this division, he has little difficulty in finding any given location. The street running due north from the Capitol is North Capitol Street, due south, South Capitol, due east, East Capitol, and due west (if it were not for the Mall) West Capitol. The section between East Capitol and North Capitol is "N. E."; and between North Capitol and the imaginary West Capitol, "N. W.", and so on. The N. W. section comprises the greater share of the business and residence portion of the city. The numbered streets run due north and south, and there are two of each, i. e., a First Street East on the east side of the Capitol, and a First Street West on the west side. The lettered streets run due east and west, parallel with East and West Capitol Streets, and there is an A Street N., and an A Street S., and so on through the alphabet, until the boundary is reached, omitting "J." In numbering, each block commences a new hundred. For example, No. 1200 F Street would be the corner of 12th and F streets, and with "N. W." added would indicate that it was in the northwest section. The avenues run at irregular angles, and plenty of time and patience is needed to thoroughly master them.

THE CAPITOL.

The centre of attraction for visitors is the Capitol, the dome of which can be seen for miles around. The corner-stone of the building was laid by Washington in 1793. The north wing (Senate) and south wing (House) have been added since 1851. The dome as it now appears from the outside was finished about the close of the war. The building is 751 feet long, and the dome is 396 feet high, surmounted by a colossal statue of Freedom, 19 1-2 feet in height. The entire building covers about 3 1-2 acres, and cost $15,000,000. It is open for visitors at all hours of the day.

The Rotunda is 96 feet in diameter and 180 feet high. The canopy of the Rotunda is decorated by a fresco representing a deification of Washington, with Freedom on his right, and Victory on his left, while thirteen female figures represent the original States. The lower walls are adorned with several interesting historical paintings, and the frieze is decorated with frescoes representing the principal events in our history.

The Library, on the west side of the Rotunda, is the largest in the country and long since outgrew its present quarters. A beautiful new building is now being erected near the east front of the Capitol for its future home. This will be devoted exclusively to the uses of the Library. At present there are about 900,000 volumes on the shelves and piled on the floors.

The hall of the House of Representatives is surrounded by Committee and Reception rooms. In the Representatives' retiring room, House floor, south end, are portraits of all the Speakers. Under the present apportionment, there are 444 Representatives. The grand stairways leading to the House galleries are of Tennessee marble. Over the east stairway is the painting of Lincoln and his Cabinet, and over the west stairway the fresco of "Westward the Course of Empire," etc.

The Senate chamber is also surrounded by Committee, Reception and other rooms. As there are now forty-four States, there are eighty-eight Senators. The President's room, Senate floor, north side, is beautifully frescoed and furnished, being the most handsome room in the building. This is occupied by the President when he visits the Capitol for the purpose of signing bills passed in the last hours of a session. Adjoining this, is the marble room, used as a reception room by the Senators. The stairways leading to the galleries are of white marble, and over each, as in the House wing, are beautiful paintings. That on the east side is Perry's victory on Lake Erie and cost $25,000. On the west side is the "Storming of Chapultepec." On the gallery floor, in the large room in the north-east corner, is a painting representing the Senate chamber during the trial of President Johnson on Articles of Impeachment. The portraits are likenesses of the most prominent actors in that great drama.

Going south from the Senate, and before reaching the Rotunda, is the U. S. Supreme Court room on the left and the entrance to the stairway leading to the dome (public) on the right. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief Justice (Fuller, of Illinois) and eight Associates.

Passing through the Rotunda, the next point of interest is the old Hall of Representatives, now known as "Statuary Hall." This contains statues presented by the several States, each being allowed two. In this hall, Clay and Webster uttered their most famous speeches. The old hall is also famous for its acoustic properties. At certain points on one side a whisper may be heard on the other, and wonderful effects are produced by talking while standing on certain tiles, easily found. Hence, also, it is known as the "Whispering Gallery."

On the basement floor are located the House and Senate post offices, document rooms, committee rooms, restaurants, bath rooms, etc. The sub-basement contains the engines for supplying hot and cold air to the building. If time is no object, a visit to the sub-basement is interesting.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

The Treasury is on Fifteenth Street, east of the White House. The principal points of interest are the Cash room where drafts and interest are paid and change made; the Secret Service Division ("Rogues' Gallery"), which contains photographs of all persons convicted of various kinds of frauds against the Government, such as counterfeiting, theft, forgery, etc.; and the vaults wherein are stored the gold and silver coin and the currency under the immediate and personal control of the Treasurer, and the U. S. bonds deposited by the National banks as security for their circulation. The north court yard of the building contains the famous silver vault, twenty feet under ground, with a capacity for the storage of 100,000,000 silver dollars, the bulk of the silver held as security for the silver certificates. The machine for macerating the currency of the Government and the National banks which has been redeemed, is in the west basement. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the large brick building located near the monument, is a part of the Treasury. In it all the plates for the printing of currency, bonds and internal revenue stamps are engraved, and the currency, bonds and stamps printed. This bureau is of special interest to the stranger. The Treasury and other Executive Departments are open to the public from 9 A. M. to 2 P. M.

State, War and Navy Building.

This is the beautiful new granite building west of the White House, fronting on 17th Street and Penna. Avenue. Aside from the beauty of the exterior and interior of the building there are rooms worth a special visit, as follows:—

State Department Library, upper floor, south front, where the visitor can see the original copy of the Declaration of Independence, and various relics of Washington and other notables. Navy Department Library, upper floor, over middle entrance, on the east side, where there are many interesting things. Diplomatic Reception Room, second floor, south front, and the office of the Secretary of State adjoining. Office of the Secretary of War, second floor, west front, over main entrance on that side. Models of war ships on first and second floor halls, opposite main eastern entrance. On the third floor, west hall, is a collection of figures clothed in the uniforms of the several branches of the service in the continental army, and the present uniforms of the regular army.

Across the street from the west main entrance is the Winder building, which contains the Ordnance Museum. Here are on exhibition many curiosities from the battle-field of great interest to all of us, such as the captured Confederate flags, piece of tree from "Bloody Angle," Spottsylvania, etc., etc.

Fronting the north end of the War Department, on the corner of 17th Street and Penna. Avenue, is the Corcoran Art Gallery, containing many famous pictures and pieces of statuary, principal among the latter being the original "Greek Slave," by Powers, purchased by Mr. Corcoran at a cost of $25,000. During the war, this building was used by the Quartermaster General, U. S. A.

WHITE HOUSE.

The Executive Mansion is located on the Government reservation fronting Penna. Avenue, between the Treasury and the State, War and Navy buildings. The west end of this building is occupied by the family of the President, and the second floor, east end, is used as the Executive Office. The East room is on the first floor, east end, and connecting with it are the Red, Green, and Blue Parlors and the State Dining room.

Department of Justice.

This department is located in the red sandstone building on Penna. Avenue, fronting the north end of the Treasury Department. This building was erected and used by the Freedman's Bank until its unfortunate failure.

The Interior Department

occupies the square bounded by F and G Streets and 7th and 9th Streets, N. W., and is passed by the Seventh Street cable cars and Met. Street Railway. The principal point of interest to the visitor is the Model Room. In this are stored in cases, models of all patents issued by the United States.

The Pension Office is a part of the Department of the Interior. It is the large red brick building in Judiciary Square, two squares east of the Interior building, and fronting on 5th and G Streets. The Met. Street R. R. passes the building. The enclosed court in this building is the largest room in the country, and is used as the Presidential Inauguration Ball Room. It is 316 by 116 feet and 120 feet high. During the Encampment it will be the scene of a grand camp fire. From the roof of this building (easily accessible), visitors can obtain a beautiful view of the city and country on the east and south. The grounds are beautified with flower beds illustrating the G. A. R. and Army Corps badges.

Post Office Department.

This building is opposite to the Interior Department. In it is the Dead Letter Office, where all uncalled-for letters are sent and opened, and, when possible, returned to the writer. The remainder are destroyed. The contents, if of any value, are sold.

Department of Agriculture.

This department is located in the red brick building on the Mall immediately east of the Monument and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Of special interest to the visitor is the museum of agricultural products in the wooden building in rear of the large brick structure

The Secretary of Agriculture is also "Old Probabilities." The Weather Bureau, a bureau of the Department of Agriculture, is located at the corner of 24th and M Streets. The Penna. Avenue cable road passes within one square of the building.

Miscellaneous.

The Naval Observatory is at the foot of 24th Street, on the river bank. There are two large glasses in place in the two domes. The larger of the two is a 26 inch glass, and at the time it was put in place, in 1873, was the largest in this country, if not in the world.

The Government Printing Office, the largest printing office in the world, is located on the corner of North Capitol and H Streets, and is reached by the Columbia Street cars. Here is printed the "Congressional Record," all public documents for Congress, and the books, blanks, etc., for the several executive departments.

Vigorous villages could be peopled from any one of several buildings named. In the Treasury proper, the Pension office, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the government printing office, each, there are from 2000 to 2500 clerks and other employes. The total number employed by the Government in the city is not far from 14,000.

Monuments and Statues.

Washington Monument. Height, 555 feet, 55 ft. square at the base and about 30 ft. square at the top of the shaft. The shaft is 500 ft. high, and the pyramidion is 55 ft. The completed monument was dedicated February 21, 1885, the 22d being Sunday. The total cost was about $1,250,000. The top may be reached by a stairway or an elevator. The latter makes a trip every half hour, and its capacity is about 35 persons.

Monument of Peace. Location, 1st Street N. W. and Penna. Avenue, west side of the Capitol grounds. This beautiful monument was erected by the officers of the Navy to the memory of the officers, seamen and marines who fell in defense of the Union during the war from 1861--65. It is 40 ft. high, and was erected in 1870 at a cost of $40,000.

Rawlins Statue. Location, Park, corner of Penna. Avenue and 9th Street, N. W. This statue was erected by the friends of General Jno. A. Rawlins (among them General Grant), and is cast from cannon captured in battles in which he took a part. Penna. Avenue cable cars pass the statue.

Thomas Statue. Location, intersection of 14th Street and M Street, N. W. This is an equestrian statue of General Geo. H. Thomas, and was erected by the Society of the Army of the Cumberland, in 1879. The total cost was about $75,000. It is on the line of the 14th Street cable cars.

Scott Monument. Location, 16th and N Streets, N. W. Erected by Congress in memory of General Winfield Scott. This is a beautiful equestrian statue and cost about $50,000. It is on the line of the red herdics.

Jackson Statue. Lafayette Square, opposite White House. Erected by Congress at a cost of $50,000. It is cast from cannon captured by General Andrew Jackson at the battle of New Orleans.

McPherson Statue. Corner of 15th and K Streets, N. W., nearly opposite the Arlington Hotel. Erected by the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, to the memory of General McPherson, at a cost of about $50,000.

Farragut Statue. 17th and K Streets, N. W., on line of the Met. Street Railway. Erected by Congress at a cost of $20.-000. It was cast from metal taken from Farragut's flag-ship, the "Hartford."

Washington Statue (equestrian). Located on Pennsylvania Avenue, at the crossing of 21st Street, N. W. Erected by Congress in 1857, at a cost of $50,000.

Dupont Statue. Connecticut Avenue and P Street, N. W. Met. cars pass near it. Erected by Congress to the memory of Admiral Dupont.

Lafayette Monument. Lafayette Square, opposite the White House. Erected by Congress.

Greene Statue. In Park, at 4th and C Streets, N. E., Erected by Congress to the memory of General Nathanael Greene.

Lincoln Monument. Opposite south front of City Hall. Erected by friends.

Statue of Marshall. West front of the Capitol. To the memory of Chief Justice Marshall.

Garfield Statue. West Front of the Capitol. Erected by the Society of the Army of the Cumberland, in 1887, at a cost of $75,000

Emancipation. Lincoln removing the shackles from the slaves. Location, Lincoln Park, eastern terminus of the Met. St. R. R. Erected by Congress.

Franklin Statue. Location, corner of 10th St. and Penna. Avenue, N. W. Erected by Stilson Hutchins and presented to the city.

Luther Statue. Luther Place, near Thomas statue. Erected by the Lutheran church.

The statue to the memory of General John A. Logan will be erected in Iowa Circle, 13th and P Streets, N. W., fronting the house in which General Logan resided before removing to Columbia Heights, head of 13th Street, N. W., where he died and where Mrs. Logan lives. General Logan is buried at the Soldier's Home, near the city.

Tomb of the Unknown, in Arlington National Cemetery. Erected over the remains of 2111 soldiers from Manassas and vicinity.

Old Army Hospitals.

Judiciary Square, in the square of same name, between the Pension Office and City Hall.

Armory Square, on 7th Street, opp. Smithsonian grounds and in the rear of the Pennsylvania R. R. depot.

Carver. On the hill north end of 14th Street.

Campbell. North end of 7th Street, near base ball fields.

Columbian. Old College grounds, west side of 14th Street, top of hill.

Douglas. Corner I Street and New Jersey Avenue. Old residence of Stephen A. Douglas.

Emory. Near the Washington Almshouse, on Eastern Branch.

Finley. North end 4th Street East.

Harewood. On 7th Street Road, adjoining west side of Soldier's Home grounds.

Kalorama. On Rock Creek, north end 21st Street W.

Lincoln. Lincoln Park, east end of East Capitol Street.

Mt. Pleasant. In suburb of same name, and beyond Columbian Hospital. On 14th Street Road.

Stone. Opposite Columbian Hospital.

Stanton. Corner I Street and New Jersey Avenue.

St. Elizabeth. Insane Asylum grounds, opposite Arsenal, and at terminus of Anacostia Street R. R.

St. Aloysius. On site of church of same name, North Capitol and I Streets.

Ricord. 14th and Massachusetts Avenue, N. W. corner.

Patent Office. In the Patent Office building.

Seminary. In Georgetown, corner of Washington and Gay Streets.

Crouch. E Street Baptist church, between 6th and 7th Streets, N. W., and the old Unitarian church (now Police Court), corner of 6th and D Streets, N. W.

The hospitals in and around Alexandria are as follows: First Division. Corner of Fairfax and Cameron Streets. Second Division—corner of Prince and Columbus Streets. Third Division—On Washington Street, between Queen and Cameron. Fairfax Seminary Hospital—Near Alexandria, old Seminary building. Augur Hospital—Near the pike on road to Seminary.

Colleges, Schools, &c.

Washington will soon be famous as a seat of learning. At the head of the list, on account of its age, is Georgetown University, on the west side of Georgetown, easily located by its high stone spires. It is the oldest Catholic college in the United States, having been founded in 1789.

Next, in point of age, is Columbian University, founded seventy years ago, and at present located on the corner of 15th and H Streets, N. W., one square north of the Treasury. Both of these universities have law and medical schools.

Howard University, on the hill just north of the city, on the 7th Street Road, and adjoining the Soldier's Home grounds, named in honor of General O. O. Howard, was chartered by Congress in 1867.

The Catholic University of America is just east of the Soldier's Home grounds, and is reached by the electric cars from 15th and G Streets, opp. Treasury department. It is in its infancy only, but promises to be a magnificent seat of learning.

Besides these there are several art and scientific schools in various parts of the city.

Much money has been expended in the perfection of our public schools, and there are now upwards of seventy large buildings devoted to their use. Many of these are beautiful in design. In all they accommodate about 35,000 children. During the Encampment they will be thrown open for the accommodation of posts, etc., for sleeping apartments.

The ground has been purchased northwest of the city, near the Tenallytown road, for the erection of the National University. It is proposed to commence building when the endowment fund reaches $5,000,000.

THE MALL.

The large Government reservation extending from 17th Street on the west to the Capitol grounds on the east, commencing on the west, contains the White House stables, the fish ponds, where the U. S. Fish Commissioners propagate fish for distribution; the Washington monument; the White Lot, south of the White House, where during the National Encampment all reunions will be held; the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and, across 14th Street, the Agricultural Department, whose grounds, extending to 12th Street, contain more than 200 varieties of trees and shrubs.

From 12th to 7th Streets extend the Smithsonian grounds, so called because the Smithsonian Institution was long the only building within these limits. East of that is now found the National Museum, which contains a rare collection of curios, foremost among which, and what every soldier and the members of his family should see, the collection of General Grant, the greater portion of which was gathered during his trip around the world. Beyond this, and nearest to 7th Street, is the Medical Museum, where the medical history of the Rebellion is fully illustrated.

Across 7th Street is Armory Square, the site of the old Army Hospital bearing its name. Then 6th Street, with the depot and tracks of the Pennsylvania R. R. From 6th to 3d Streets is a park without buildings, while from 3d to 1st Street are the Botanical Gardens, under the control of Congress, and from which Senators and members obtain the supply of plants and cuttings sent to their constituents.

Historical Notes.

In the winter of 1861--62, while in command of the Army of the Potomac, General George B. McClellan's headquarters were in the building No. 1520 H Street, opp. the Arlington Hotel.

While General of the Army, after the close of the war, General Grant's headquarters were in the brick dwelling on the S. W. corner of 17th and F streets, opp. the west front of the State Department. This building is now the home of Clara Barton, National Chaplain, W. R. C., and the headquarters of the Red Cross Society. The desk used by General Grant at that time is in Department Headquarters, G. A. R. Hall, 1412 Pennsylvania Avenue.

In 1869, when General Grant was inaugurated President, and General Sherman succeeded to the command of the Army, headquarters were established by the latter at his residence, No. 817, 15th Street, N. W., one square north of the Treasury.

On the retirement of General Sherman, General Sheridan established headquarters in the N. E. corner, first floor, of the War Department. General Sheridan lived and died on the north-east corner of 17th and R. I. Ave., about four squares north of the Art Gallery, in a house given to him when he came to Washington to take command of the army. The house is occupied by Mrs. Sheridan and the three children.

Admiral Porter, during all the time he resided in this city, had his headquarters in No. 1710 H Street, N. W. It was in his headquarter room in this house that he was mustered into the G. A. R., as a member of Post No. 400, Department of Pennsylvania.

During the war, President Lincoln used a cottage in the Soldier's Home grounds as a summer residence. The plans to kidnap him were to be put into execution on the road between the grounds and the city.

In April, 1865, he was assassinated at Ford's theatre, on 10th Street, between E and F streets, N. W., one square west of the Interior Department. The old theatre is now used by the Government as a portion of the office of the Surgeon General of the Army. He died in house No. 516, on the opposite side of the street. The house is marked with a marble tablet over the front first floor windows.

President Garfield was assassinated in the ladies' waiting room of the Pennsylvania R. R. depot, 6th Street, below Pennsylvania Avenue. The spot where he fell is marked by a silver star set in the tiling of the floor, and a marble tablet is set in the wall opposite. The assassin stood behind the west jamb of the entrance from B Street.

The large brick building fronting the Lafayette statue, and on the same square with McClellan's headquarters, is the present residence of Ex-Secretary Blaine. In ante-bellum times, this building was the famous club house in front of which General Sickles, then a member of Congress from New York, shot and killed Philip Barton Key. Sickles at the time resided in the house midway the block on the opposite side of the park. The house is No. 14 Jackson Place, and was afterwards occupied by Speaker and Vice-President Colfax. At the time of the assassination of Mr. Lincoln, Secretary of State Seward lived in the house now occupied by Mr. Blaine, and it was there the attempt was made to take his life.

On the eventful night of the killing of Mr. Lincoln, Vice-President Johnson was boarding at the Kirkwood House, a hotel on the present site of the large brick building on the N. E. corner of Pennsylvania Avenue and 12th Street, N. W. It was here that the assassin went to find Mr. Johnson, and here Mr. Johnson took the oath of office as President.

Willard's Hotel, familiar to the Union Veteran, is at the corner of Pennsylvania Avenue and 14th Street, N. W., opp. G. A. R. Hall.

Hammock's restaurant, long since gone, stood at the corner of 15th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, opposite the south end of the Treasury. Jewelry and diamonds are now dispensed from the site of this once familiar establishment.

The old "State Department," an unpretentious brick building, stood on the present site of the north end of the Treasury building. The old War and Navy buildings, of the same pattern as the old State building, gave way to the State, War and Navy departments building.

The large brick building standing on the N. E. corner of 19th and I Streets, N. W., was the office, during "war times," of Provost Marshal General Fry.

The conspirators, Mrs. Surratt, and Harrold, Payne and Atzerodt, were imprisoned, tried, found guilty, hung and buried in the Arsenal grounds. Booth's body was brought up the Potomac river, landed at the Arsenal wharf and buried in the grounds, where it remained for a number of years, when it was removed to Baltimore.

John Surratt, son of Mrs. Surratt who was hung, and one of the conspirators, was captured four years afterwards in Italy, brought home, tried and acquitted in the City Hall located in Judiciary Square, near the Pension Office. Mrs. Surratt, at the time the conspiracy was formed, and when she was arrested, lived at No. 606 H Street, N. W.

Guiteau, the assassin of General Garfield, was tried and convicted in the City Hall building, and hung in the U. S. Jail, located on the extreme eastern side of the city.

On 1st Street, N. E., between East Capitol and A streets, opposite the east front of the Capitol, are three large dwelling houses, Nos. 21, 23 and 25. These were the old Capitol Prison of war times. Within those walls, Wirz, the Andersonville prison keeper, was imprisoned and hung.

When Booth killed President Lincoln, he escaped from the rear of the theatre, and came out of the alley into F Street, between Nos. 918 and 920. This was long known as "Booth's Alley." Booth, at the time of the assassination, or just prior thereto, boarded at the old Herndon House, located on the S. W. corner of 9th and F Streets, N. W., the site of the present large granite building.

The old frame building at the end of the passenger depot of the B. and O. R. R., now painted black, until recently bore the words "Soldier's Rest." In this building troops arriving in Washington during the war, were fed, prior to going south. Many of us have dined and supped in its spacious hall.

The slave pen, or market, was at the corner of 7th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, on the site of the present Centre Market.

Braddock's Rock is on the Potomac bank, in front of the Observatory. It is so named because Braddock landed his troops at that point.

Meridian Stone. The stone marking the meridian of Washington is on Meridian Hill, at the north end of 16th Street.

The large granite building on New Jersey Avenue, fronting the south side of the Capitol grounds, now occupied by the Marine Hospital Bureau, was temporarily used by President Arthur as an Executive Office, immediately after the death of President Garfield, and before his family had vacated the White House.

Ex-Secretary of the Treasury, and Ex-Chief Jutice Chase, and Sx-Secretary of War Stanton are buried in Oak Hill Cemetery, Georgetown.

General Garfield, while a member of Congress, lived in the brick dwelling now standing on the N. E. corner of 13th and I Streets, N. W., opposite Franklin Square.

Secretary Stanton, during the war, lived at 1325 K Street, opposite Franklin Square, which was then an unimproved common, and used as a camp ground.

President Lincoln attended the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, near 13th Street, N. W. President Grant at the Metropolitan M. E. church, corner of 4 1-2 and C Streets, N. W., one square south of the City Hall. President Hayes at the Foundry M. E. church, corner 14th and G Streets, N. W. President Garfield at the Memorial church, Vermont Avenue, between N and O Streets, N. W. President Arthur at St. John's Episcopal church, corner 16th and H Streets, N. W., opposite White House. President Cleveland, Presbyterian church, 4 1-2 Street, between C and D streets, N. W., near City Hall. President Harrison is a member of the Church of the Covenant, Connecticut Avenue, opposite British legation.

The headquarters of Quartermaster General Meigs during the war were in the Corcoran Art Gallery, opposite War Department.

Commissary General Eaton had headquarters at S. W. corner of H Street and Jackson Place; house now occupied by General Beale.

Surgeon General Barnes was located on the N. W. corner of Pennsylvania Avenue and 15th Street, opposite Treasury. The building is standing and occupied by Riggs Bank.

The Paymaster General was, during the war and for a long time thereafter located in the large brick building on the S. E. corner of 15th and F streets, the site of the present Corcoran building.

General Augur, while commanding the Department of the District of Columbia, during the war, was located in a brick building on the N. E. corner of Pennsylvania Avenue and 15 1-2 Street, adjoining residence of Ex-Secretary Blaine. Torn down long since.

Secretary of the Navy Gideon Welles lived in No. 1607 H Street, N. W., opposite Lafayette Square. House now standing.

At the southern extremity of 17th Street, and on its west side, are the grounds originally owned by John Burns, then a large holder of Washington real estate, and of whom Washington secured much of the site of the city. The ruins of Burns' house remain, shaded by the old trees under which he and Washington, two shrewd real estate dealers, did much of their bargaining. Burns, a testy Scotchman, at one time remarked that Washington never amounted to much until he "married the widow Curtis." Burns' only child married a Mr. Van Ness, a member of Congress from New York, who erected a mansion close to the humble home of his bride's father—which the old gentleman never deserted—and it was in the gloomy vaults under this mansion that the would-be abductors planned to conceal President Lincoln when they had captured him.

The Artillery Camp of Instruction was near the eastern branch of the Potomac, beyond the end of Massachusetts Avenue; the locality can be reached by cars on New York Avenue, which start from 15th Street.

Washington once boarded at the house now known as the "Hillman House," North Capitol Street, between B and C streets.

Battle Fields, &c.

On the south side of the Potomac, and opposite to the city, the line of hills is Arlington Heights. These are reached by the well-known Long Bridge, the north abutment of which is the south end of 14th Street, a short distance in the rear of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing; and by the Aqueduct Bridge, the north end of which is at the extreme west end of Georgetown. In returning from the first and second battles of Bull Run, the Federal troops entering the city crossed on the Long Bridge. Three miles above the Aqueduct Bridge is the Chain Bridge, and on the high ground at the south end of this bridge is Fort Dodge. Four miles on the road leading south from the bridge (the Drainsville Pike) is Langley, Va., (Camp Pierpont) and twelve miles further is Drainsville, where there was a fight in December, 1861. South-east from Langley, about three miles, is Lewinsville. Crossing the Aqueduct Bridge, and following the Government road to the top of Arlington Heights, you reach Fort Meyer, the signal station, garrisoned by two or three battalions of U. S. cavalry.

A short distance to the east is the Arlington National Cemetery, where 17,000 Federal soldiers and sailors are buried. These grounds were once the estate of General Lee of the rebel army, and his mansion still stands on a high point overlooking the river and city. The tombs of General Sheridan and Admiral Porter are on the slope in front of the mansion, and many beautiful monuments have been erected on the grounds, one of these to the memory of General M. C. Meigs, the Quartermaster General of the Army. These grounds may be reached by the Pennsylvania Avenue cable cars to Georgetown, and a conveyance can there be hired to Arlington and return at twenty-five to fifty cents per passenger. From two to four miles south on the main road, beyond Fort Meyer, are Ball's and Bailey's cross roads, Munson's Hill, and other famous review and camp grounds in the winter of 1861--62.

Alexandria, on the Potomac, six miles below Washington, may be reached by boat from the 7th Street wharf, or by rail from the Pennsylvania R. R. depot, half a square south of Pennsylvania Avenue, on 6th Street. At the Marshall House, on Main Street, Alexandria, Col. Ellsworth was killed by the hotel keeper, Jackson, in the spring of 1861. Jackson was in turn killed by Brownell, of Ellsworth's command. Christ church (Episcopal), a short distance from the Marshall House, was built of brick imported from England. Washington was a vestryman of this church. His pew—No. 59—can be seen in about the condition it was when he occupied it. General

R. E. Lee, while residing at Arlington, attended this church. His pew was No. 49.

The hills adjoining Alexandria were one great camp ground during the war. It was here that the Army of the Potomac rendezvoused preparatory to embarking for Yorktown in the spring of 1862. The convalescent camp was on the hills near the city, and from any direction you can see the cupola of familiar old Fairfax Seminary.

Going down the river from Washington the Washington Arsenal at the south-east extremity of the city is on your left. At this point Anacostia Creek flows into the Potomac. A short distance up this stream is the Navy Yard, in the rear Marines, and the famous U. S. Marine Band. The Navy Yard and barracks are accessible from the centre of the city, via the Pennsylvania Avenue cable cars. Opposite the Arsenal, on the high point on the east bank of the creek, is the Insane Asylum.

On the river, just across the creek from the Arsenal, is Giesboro Point, used during the war by the Government as a horse corral, from which all horses and mules sent to the eastern army were shipped. On the hills back of the Point, and below the asylum, is Fort Lyon, the ruins of which are easy of location. A short distance further down, on the same side, is the Powder Magazine, while just before Alexandria is reached, the pier of the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. extends into the river. Twelve miles below Washington, on the north bank of the Potomac, is Fort Washington, a large stone fort, used during the war, while two or three miles further down on the south bank is Mount Vernon and the tomb of Washington. Mount Vernon can be reached by boat from the 7th Street wharf.

Manassas Junction is twenty-eight miles from Washington, and is accessible by rail from the 6th Street (Penna. R. R.) depot, via Alexandria, Fairfax and Union Mills Station. Bull Run is crossed a short distance beyond Union Mills. At the Junction, the train to the Bull Run battle-field takes the right-hand road, known as the Manassas Gap road. The battle-field is about four miles from the Junction. This road passes near Groveton, Chantilly and Centreville. From the Junction the left-hand road (main stem) passes the Briston Station battle-ground, crossing Kettle Run, and thence to Warrenton Junction, Cattlets, Rappahannock River, Brandy Station, Culpeper C. H., etc.

Fredericksburg, Falmouth and Richmond may be reached by trains from the Penn'a R. R. depot. Fredericksburg is 60 miles distant from Washington, and from there conveyances may be hired to Chancellorsville, Wilderness and Spottsylvania Courthouse battle-fields. Continuing south from Fredericksburg, is New Market Cross Roads, Cold Harbor, Richmond, Petersburg, etc. During the war Fredericksburg was reached from Washington by boat to Quantico or Belle Plain, thence by rail or wagon a distance of twelve miles.

South Mountain is a short ride over the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. (depot on New Jersey Ave., one square north of the Capitol) to Frederick, Md.

To Antietam, Md., you go from the same depot to near Harper's Ferry, where you take the Hagerstown Branch Road.

Winchester, Va., and Cedar Creek, the scene of Sheridan's famous ride, may be reached by train over the B. and O. R. R., via Harper's Ferry, and the Shenandoah Valley Branch Road. Besides the beautiful natural scenery at Harper's Ferry, the place is made interesting on account of John Brown's raid, just prior to the war. The site of John Brown's Fort, the old engine house, is easily located. Charlestown, W. Va., where Brown was hung, is between the Ferry and Winchester. The distance to Harper's Ferry is 52 miles.

Gettysburg is reached by trains over either the B. and O. or Penna. R. R's. It is a four hours ride, and the trip will consume a whole day. No one has ever regretted the time or money spent in visiting this renowned field. The location of each Federal regiment or command engaged is plainly and handsomely marked.

Leesburg and Edward's Ferry, on the Potomac (one of the crossings familiar to the Army of the Potomac), is a short ride by rail from the Penna. R. R. depot.

Ball's Bluff, on the Potomac, is near Leesburg.

Tenallytown, the old camp ground, and Fort Pennsylvania, may be reached by the Penna. Ave. cable cars, thence via the Tenallytown electric railway.

Fort Stevens, made interesting by Early's raid in 1864, is on the high ground north of the city, and between the 7th and 14th Street roads. Above Tenallytown are the Great Falls of the Potomac, sixteen miles from Washington. These may be reached by small steam packet on the canal (Chesapeake and Ohio), or by carriage over the beautiful Conduit road from Georgetown, past the large reservoirs from which the city receives its water supply, to the Glen Echo Chatauqua and Cabin John's Bridge. This bridge is the longest single stone arch in the world and was built for a conduit for the water supply. The tunnel or sluice-way is continued under the conduit road.

A Two Hours' Trip for Ten Cents and What You Can See.

If you are in Georgetown and will take the Penna. Avenue cable cars to the Navy Yard (five miles), and return by the Met. Street cars, you will see the following points of interest: viz.:

Leaving Georgetown you cross Rock Creek, which separates Washington from Georgetown, thence to Pennsylvania Ave., passing the Washington statue at 22d Street, and at 17th Street passing the State, War and Navy departments on the south-east corner and the Corcoran Art Gallery on the opposite or left-hand side. Next is the White House on the right and Lafayette Square, with Jackson and Lafayette statues, on the left. Half a square further is the Department of Justice and the Blaine residence on the left (in front of which Sickles shot Key), and the Treasury Department on the right. Turning down 15th Street, passing the whole length of the Treasury, and again to the left on Pennsylvania Avenue, the Re-union tents and camp are to the right and south of the Treasury, while in the square is Willard's Hotel on the left, and G. A. R. Hall on the right. Crossing 14th Street, the new power house of the Pennsylvania Ave. cable road is on the right. Passing down to 9th Street, the Rawlins statue and the Centre Market are on the right, and crossing the 7th Street cable road to 6th Street, is the Penna. R. R. depot, and continuing down to 3d Street, the Botanical Gardens are on the right and the Peace monument and Capitol in front. Turning to the left at the Capitol, the car goes to the B. and O. depot. To the right you go between the Botanical and Capitol grounds, passing the Garfield statue. Continuing on around the Capitol grounds, to the left, up the hill at the top of which the Capitol is close on the left, and on the right the large granite building known as General Butler's house, which President Arthur occupied for a short time after the death of General Garfield. The next square is the Capitol grounds, and adjoining these, in the enclosure on the left, is the new Library building in course of construction. Down Pennsylvania Avenue to 8th Street, thence south a few squares, the Marine Barracks, the home of the U. S. Marine Corps and Band, is passed, and a short distance further the Navy Yard, end of the road.

At the foot of the Navy Yard is the wharf and river.

After visiting the Navy Yard, a short walk up 8th Street, past the Marine Barracks, brings you to East Capitol Street and the east terminus of the Met. Street railway, three squares from Lincoln Park and the statue of Emancipation. Take a west-bound car going the full length of East Capitol Street, passing (near the Capitol grounds) the north side of the new library building. Turning into 1st Street, the Capitol grounds are on the left, and what was once the old Capitol Prison, Nos. 21, 23 and 25, is on the right. Wending around the Capitol grounds, and down to the foot of the hill, you pass the B. and O. R. R. depot. Thence up hill to 4 1-2 Street, passing the Lincoln monument and City Hall; thence to 5th Street and two squares north past Judiciary Square (the site of the old Hospital of that name), to the corner of F Street, where the Pension Office and grounds (especially beautified for the Encampment) are on the right. Two squares on F Street, and you are at 7th Street, with the Interior Department on the right and the Post Office on the left. At 10th Street, Ford's old theatre, where Mr. Lincoln was assassinated, is a few doors to the left. The Treasury is seen standing across F Street, and at 14th Street the car turns to the north, going to H Street, when it turns west at 15th Street, passing Columbia College on the left and the Shoreham Hotel (built by Vice-President Morton) on the right. The next left-hand corner was McClellan's headquarters during 1861--62, with Lafayette Square in front and the Arlington on the right. Through H to 17th Street and up one square is the Farragut statue and square, fronting which, on the south side, is the site of Secretary Tracy's house, destroyed by fire about two years ago. At K Street the car turns into Connecticut Avenue, where, at N Street, it passes the Church of the Covenant on the right and the British Legation on the left. One square further is Dupont statue and Circle, with Secretary Blaine's new house and the Chinese Legation, in front of where you stop for a transfer to Georgetown.

DEPARTMENT OF THE POTOMAC.

A Provisional Department was organized in 1867, with L. Edwin Dudley as Commander, and the Permanent Department was organized in 1869.

Comrade A. F. Dinsmore, the present Department Commander, enlisted April 25, 1861, in Co. E, 3d Michigan Infantry, and was discharged May 31, 1862, on account of a gunshot wound in the left hip, received at the battle of Fair Oaks, Va. A large portion of the hip-bone was taken out but the ball has never been removed. The wound is still open, never having healed.
